PRESIDENTIAL HANDLING

Deliver following message from President to Prime Minister Macmillan and advise date, time of delivery:

QUOTE June 19, 1959. Dear Harold: As you will see, Khrushchev's reply was not responsive to the points made in my letter. Worse still, it was an artfully deceptive effort to reduce the fundamental differences which have been exposed at Geneva to one or two fictitious issues. Moreover, Khrushchev has now come out publicly with pretty much the same line in his speech today before the East German communist leaders in Moscow.

Now that we have a recess we will have to see where we stand and consult together as respects our next moves. I am of course anxious to talk with Chris Herter about this and shall do so as soon as he returns. I assume you will be doing the same with Selwyn after which we will be in touch again.

I must say that my current feeling is that I can be just as firm as firm and just as patient and just as persistent as Khrushchev and this, I am sure, is true of all of us.

With warm regards,
As ever,
